DIVISIONAL OVERVIEW

The Credit Risk Management & Advisory (CRMA) department interacts with every division of Goldman Sachs. Leveraging its extensive expertise in financial, credit and risk analysis, CRMA provides accurate and objective judgment to the firm and its clients. Since CRMA has been structured to work closely with almost every part of the firm, its professionals gain diverse financial experience and a broad perspective on how the entire firm functions. The interaction with numerous departments and the range of projects that ensue allow for a challenging, varied and multi-dimensional work environment.

RESPONSIBILITIES

As an analyst in CRMA in Salt Lake City, you might:

- Analyze the firm's trading counterparties and rate them based on their credit quality, a process typically requiring review of financial and business profiles
- Monitor and report trends with the counterparties and industries you cover (industry teams include consumer goods, energy and power, financial institutions, hedge funds, retail, sovereigns, technology, transportation, and others)
- Assist in determining the firm's risk appetite to counterparties
- Prepare robust reports for senior management that describe the firm's credit risk exposure, recent trends, and meaning changes period-over-period
- Monitor compliance with counterparty trading limits
- Negotiate transaction-related documentation

QUALIFICATIONS

CRMA offers many opportunities at the analyst level. We look for candidates with excellent academic records and a combination of analytical and communication skills. Flexibility, time management and the ability to learn quickly are crucial in this fast-paced environment.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Upon joining the department, you will participate in an extensive training program which will teach you about Goldman Sachs and its business as well as fundamental analytical skills. This broader training is followed by training in credit analysis.

You will also benefit from a horizontal organizational structure, which allows constant access to senior members of the firm. Encouragement, advice and exchange of ideas promote on-the-job learning in an environment which fosters teamwork, responsibility and professional growth.
