Journal of Alexander Neibaur

George R. Riser, Editor
Introduction

In 1978 I began to make a true copy of the journal of Alexander Neibaur (Feb. 5, 1841 to Apr. 16, 1862). Pocket Journal (previous copies made by Jess Riser and Clara Neibaur) were in modern idiom and some omissions and words not easily decipherable were omitted. These copies were made from the journal before the original was given to the LDS Church Historian's Office in Salt Lake City.

The copy here was sourced from microfilm of the journal (Pocket Journal size 7 1/8 x 4 5/8 in.) and the aid of the previous copies. Page numbers of the original diary are marked where the text of the original page ends. Some of the pages of the original journal have numbers which were added at a later date as seen by the numbers overlapping the entry word. Brackets also appear to have been added at a later time to separate dates. Some of these brackets occur several words before the next date. These brackets have been included. There is little punctuation. Words are also abbreviated. Comparison was made to the copy made by Theda Bassett Butt. There were numerous minor differences and some omissions. For example, the keelboat to Nauvoo, Illinois mentioned herein was the Otter.

There are no smiley faces, little pigs. Just junk on microfilm (Basset). The ledger pages and the Hebrew page, included here, were also omitted from the Bassett Butt version. These pages have been placed at the end. A few words and letters are still not decipherable and have been shown as a question mark (?). Several Hebrew characters have been included, the meaning of which could not be determined as they translate as numbers. No entries were made for the year 1843 except those found on the ledger pages.

I believe this is the most accurate copy of the journal in existence. I am still trying to determine what the words are that were not decipherable.

The journal has recently been scanned and is more readable than the old microfilm.

About the Editor

George R. Riser was born in Salt Lake City where he attended South High School before enrolling in biology at the University of Utah. His college years were interrupted by World War II, and he was called to active duty in the army infantry, rising to the rank of 2nd Lieutenant. He was able to return to his studies in 1944, paying his way through college by working at the Union Pacific Railroad station as a janitor, baggage handler and passenger director.

In addition to the plants and animals he was able to study in biology, Riser also enjoyed singing. He studied with Richard P. Condie and Emma Lucy Gates. When Utah celebrated the 100th anniversary of the arrival of pioneers, was one of the principal events was an original musical, telling the story of the Mormon migration to Utah beginning in 1847. Promised Valley was revived regularly in Salt Lake City and beyond, and in multiple languages abroad, for the next sixty years.

Riser attended Temple Medical College for a year and worked as a statistician with the Army Signal Corps at the Philadelphia Depot where he met his wife, Bernice (now deceased). When someone pointed out a job notice for an entomologist at the Quartermaster, he quickly jumped at the opportunity. There he studied the life cycles of seventeen species of cockroaches, all of which were capable of parthenogenesis, or reproduction without fertilization, including one species that has no males whatsoever. He served in that role until the research and development division was moved to Massachusetts.

Later, Mr. Riser became a polymer and physical chemist at the USA Eastern Regional Research Laboratory of the Department of Agriculture where he worked for twenty-three years.

He currently resides in Huntingdon Valley, Pennsylvania.

About Alexander Neibaur

Educated as a rabbi, Alexander Neibaur was the first dentist to practice in Utah and the first Jew to join the Latter-day Saint movement. He was educated for the profession at the University of Berlin and was a skilled dentist before the establishment of dental schools in America. He was fluent in seven languages and as many dialects.

Born in 1808 in Ehrenbreitstein Fortress, Koblenz, German, he arrived in Great Salt Lake City with his wife Ellen in 1848. He died in 1883.

Today, the “dentist of Brigham Young,” and many others in the Territory of Utah, is considered a founding father of the University of Utah’s School of Dentistry, founded in 2012.
From the Publisher

George R. Riser, grandson to Alexander Neibaur and curator/editor of this diary, is an alumnus (BS’1947) of what is now the School of Biological Sciences at the University of Utah. Through his generosity, the George Riser Scholarship Endowment was established and continues to be of great benefit to biology students—in the classroom and in the field.

In 2017, under the leadership of Distinguished Professor and Chair of the Department of Biology (eventually Director of the School of Biological Sciences) M. Denise Dearing, Mr. Riser was awarded the SBS Distinguished Alumni Award. With gratitude for his philanthropy, we are pleased to publish this work, which commenced forty-four years ago, to honor both Alexander Neibaur and his grandson.
